About a third of nonprofits serving underrepresented communities engage voters.
Voters engaged by nonprofits are more likely to be younger, lower-income, and POC.

• Policy matters, but gaps in participation remain
• Competition matters, but campaigns cannot be counted on to close gaps, and competition is waning in some states after redistricting

There’s a gap for nonprofits to fill
Why make a plan?

“Plan for what is difficult while it is easy, do what is great while it is small”

Sun Tzu
How taking time to plan will pay off

With a plan
• Set goals and track progress
• Clear timelines, start early
• Identify key players and get buy-in
• Gather materials and plan training

Without a plan
• No way to evaluate success
• Fall behind and start too late
• No one “gets it” or helps out
• Under-resourced and confused
Asking the big questions

WHY?

Why is your organization motivated to engage voters?

Why is it “worth it” for your organization to invest time and resources into voting?

How does voter engagement advance your mission?

• Does it benefit the voters you serve?
• Does it advance advocacy or policy goals?
• Does it increase your visibility or influence?
• Is it a matter of equity and accountability?

Defining your “why” clearly builds buy in and confidence among your leadership, staff, supporters, and voters you serve.
What types of information or assistance do you want to offer voters?

What are the barriers you want to help voters overcome?

WHAT?

Are you mobilizing voters to participate in primaries or general elections?

What are your state dates and deadlines for registration, vote by mail requests, and early voting?

Tip: Start at least 6-8 weeks before the registration deadline.
How can you leverage existing relationships, trust, and capacity?

How can you choose community outreach and partnership strategies that advance your goals?

WHERE? WHO?

Where’s the money?

We regularly hear from nonprofits that funding is a barrier to engaging voters

• Leverage free resources from national initiatives
• Seek out partnerships to add staff capacity
• Approach your existing funders and donors using our Foundation Toolkits
• Note that there are legal barriers to private nonprofits funding voter registration (4945f).
Thank you!

We look forward to connecting with you around the work plan template and future webinars and training.
